

Student A

Guess the accident! Read what three people said to their friends who had silly accidents. Try to guess what each person was doing, what happened, and what their friend's injuries were.

Read your answers to Student B. Student B will tell you what really happened. Who guessed best?

You should have concentrated more on cooking, Jack. You shouldn't have used such a sharp knife.

I think Jack was cooking and he _____

You shouldn't have run so far on the first day, Sara. You should have started training earlier, and you should have started by running short distances.

I think Sara _____

You shouldn't have stood on a chair to reach the ceiling, Steve. You should have used a ladder.

I think Steve _____

Student B's accidents

Mia went for a long walk. She was wearing old boots, which were too small for her. She got blisters on both feet.

Matt was cooking when his cell phone rang. He answered the phone and continued cooking with one hand. He burnt his hand.

Dora went skiing last year. She hadn't skied before, but she decided to go down the most difficult slope. She fell and broke her leg.

Student B

Guess the accident! Read what three people said to their friends who had silly accidents. Try to guess what each person was doing, what happened, and what their friend's injuries were.

Read your answers to Student A. Student A will tell you what really happened. Who guessed best?

You shouldn't have worn your old boots for the walk, Mia. You should have bought some new ones that were the right size.

I think Mia went for a walk and she _____

You shouldn't have answered your cell phone while you were cooking, Matt. You should have concentrated on cooking.

I think Matt _____

You shouldn't have tried to ski down the most difficult slope, Dora. You should have chosen a much easier slope to start with.

I think Dora _____

Student A's accidents

Jack was cooking, he needed to cut some vegetables. He used a very sharp knife, but he wasn't concentrating. He cut his finger.

Sara wanted to run a marathon. She started training only a week before the race. On the first day of her training she ran 30 km. She pulled muscles in both legs!

Steve decided to paint the ceiling in his bedroom. He got the paint, and he stood on a chair to reach the ceiling. He fell off the chair and bruised his knee quite badly.